FORCED TO USE HIS KNIFE.

COL. GOODLOE KILLED HIS POLITICAL RIVAL IN SELF-DEFENSE.

Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson Tells the Story of the Bloody Duel Retween the Two Kentucky Politicians-About a Fight-The True Story.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. - First Assistant Postmaster-General Clarkson has just returned from Kentucky, whither he went to attend the funeral of Col. Goodlee, his close personal friend. He says the true story of the recent sad tragedy at Lexington, Ky., and the causes leading up to it have not yet been fully understood in the North. Few people are better able to tell the true story, and Mr. Clarkson tells it in this way: In May of last year a controversy came up in political convention in which Col. Goodlog and Col. Swope were both members. It was a pretty sharp debate, in which there were some personal allusions. After the Convention was over and Goodloe was at the hotel, surrounded by a crowd, Swope appeared in a very violent manner and called Goodlee by many epithets and began to take off his coat for a fist right. Those who were present say that Goodlee looked at him with composure and silence, simply remarking at last. "Gentlemen do not settle their controversies with fist fights, nor in such According to the Southern idea, which it is difficult to understand in the North, this put an imputation upon Col. Goodlee which could only be removed by an apology from Swope or a settlement by personal conflict. Senator Beck and other mutual friends intervened and made a settlement of the trouble acording to the Southern code of honor, that is, by explanations on each side and an agreement to drop the whole subject. Goodlee accepted this and the matter became smoothed over and had almost passed out of the public mind until the past Summer, when Swope, having a quarrel with a man named Kimball, printed a card about it, and in the same card lugged in his old contest with Goodloe and again applied offensive epithets to Goodloe and again applied offensive epitnets to him. This was while Col. Goodloe was on a yachting excursion with Senator Cony and other members of the National Committee, According to the Southern code the man who this broke an agreement of honor was himself his honored. When Col. Goodloe returned to kensing the felt the insult of this new attach upon him, and many of his friends told him he must him, and many of his friends told him he must she took a possimistic view of most subjects and him, and many of his friends told him he must mets told him be must | she took a possimistic view of most were sensible, and in a refused to minute much in society.

fact the whole State, which knew that Goodloe feared nothing in the world and was a man of unimpeachable bravery, felt that he should no longer pay heed to a man who had thus forfeited his claim to attention. Swope was a bach her, while Goodloe was the hear of a family peculiarly dependent on him. A mortal contest between them, therefore, would not have been equal, but Goodloe chated under the situation and under the constant instituations made [Still he maintained, as he had for a year hefore, the pledige to his wife and family not to be the aggressor. This promise he kept to the bitter one, and no can ever tell how much the promise cost the chiralrous, his hainfield and fearlessman. It was a long struggle of eighteen months of the canal upon Swope in the Post-Office at Lexington and fearlessness. On the fatal Frday he came upon Swope in the Post-Office at Lexington and subjectly. He was unarmed. He had puriously kept himself unarmed simply that in such a sadden meeting as had come he would not be tempted to become an aggressor. His opponent was armed. There is no doubt that he was armed for the purpose of meeting Goodloe, even if not for the purpose of meeting thing at the dia alcantage of finding Goodloe unarmed. Those who saw the scene said that even then he avoided the contest, while Swope provoked it and imally added an additional insult to his high-minded antigonist. Swope had taken his mail from the box, which was directly under Goodloe show, and when the latter came up, still stood in the way, and did it in a defiant manner, with the evident purpose of provoding Goodloe is specially a proposed in the way and did it in a defiant manner, with the evident purpose of provoding Goodloe is specially and the way, and did it in a defiant manner. loe's box, and when the latter came up, still stood in the way, and did it in a defiant manner, with the evident purpose of proveding Goodlee's singer and, if possible, a blow from him.

When Goodlee, surprised by this fresh insult, stepped back. Swope instantly drew his revolver from the convenient outside overcont pocket and levelies it at Goodlee's head. Goodlee lead on an overcoat and Prince Albert coat underneath. In such an extremity he thought of the knife that he had in his pecket, the same knife that nearly every gentleman who has a large country place almost invariably keeps. When I have veited him at his home I have often seen him take this knife from his pocket to trim up a bush on the grounds or cut off a dying limb from a tree or shrub. While he was getting out this knife, seeing that his antagonist had fatal purpose in his eye, he had to fight down with his left hand the drawn and cocked pistol, which was levelled at his head, while getting out his own weamon with his right hand. He struck the pistol down to a point even with his right-hand yest pocket when swope fired. This was before Goodloe had yet drawn his knife from his pocket. It was not until he had felt the bullet of Swope in his body that he draw his knife and struck his antagonist. It was no wonder that he did this; any human being with courage would have done the same thing. same thing.

THEY HOPE FOR HIS RECOVERY.

Friends of Jefferson Davis Expect He Will Regalu His Benith.

[SPECIAL TO THE WORLD,] NEW OBLEANS, Nov. 18. -Jefferson Davis was very restless again last night. He experienced another attack of fever, his temperature reaching 99% degrees. This morning he was quite sick and his condition during the day was not as promising as yesterday. This evening, however, there was a slight change for the better and Dr. Chaille told THE WORLD correspondent that Mr. Davis was much better.

Mr. Davis's friends take hope from the fact that no consultation of physicians has been called, but there is no disguising the fact that they are seriously alarmed. Members of the household, however, express no doubt of Mr. Davis's ultimate recovery. They do not think the patient is dangerously ill, but will enter into no details of his condition.

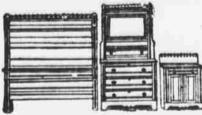

Shot Dead in His Bed.

Mexico, Mo., Nov. 18,- E. C. Collins, a prominent farmer of this county, living ten miles northeast of this city, was shot and killed about 2 o'clock this morning while asleep in bed. The assassin held the pist ol close to his victim and the ball, entering the temple, passed entirely through the head. Mrs. Collins was asteep in the same bed. A married daughter and two sons, aged sixteen and twenty years, were asteep in the house, but the shot did not awaken them. Before the killing the house was robbed of $20, a revolver and a watch.
